

Minor in Health Administration

<https://ahs.illinois.edu/healthadmin-minor>

Health administration is a dynamic field that is rapidly evolving given the changes in healthcare, insurance, policy, and technology.

Students with this foundational knowledge will be better prepared to deal with the complexities of healthcare and the novel challenges that emerge from unpredictable health situations, such as the COVID-19 pandemic.

Expertise in health administration can help students enter into an occupation that has excellent job prospects with a high median salary.

The coursework offers exposure to health care systems, hospital and insurance administration, and management principles relative to health care institutions.
